Trade Agreements Benefit U.S. Exports

Exports to FTA partners are up 64% since 2009

47% of U.S. goods exports go to our trade agreement partners

The United States has trade agreements in force with twenty markets around the world
In 2014, the U.S. had record exports to FTA partners Canada, Mexico, Korea, Colombia, Israel, Dominican Republic, and Oman

The U.S. has a $7.3 billion trade surplus in non-oil products with our FTA partners

Since 2009, U.S. exports to our FTA partners have grown more rapidly (64%) than our exports to the rest of the world (45%)
Future Trade Agreements Will Provide Additional Benefits

As a share of goods export value, 2012 exports* from SMEs exceeded the overall worldwide average of 33% in many FTA markets, including new partners South Korea and Colombia

*Most recent data available

FTAs Are Major Markets for Many States
In 2014, 28 states had record-high exports to these partners

Current & proposed agreements account for...
70% of U.S. goods exports
64% of global GDP (including the U.S.)
More than 60% of global trade* (including the U.S.)

Source data: U.S. Census Bureau; Exporter Database; World Trade Organization (WTO); International Monetary Fund (IMF)
Last Updated: February 25, 2015